

The Pitch Structure

The 5-minute pitch that lands as the obvious solution. Tied to THEIR problem, in THEIR language, with THEIR result baked in.

Pitch As Prescription, Not Pitch

If discovery was the diagnosis, the pitch is the prescription. You're not 'selling' anymore — you're prescribing the obvious solution to the problem they just described. Done right, the pitch feels like inevitability, not persuasion.

→ The 5-Part Pitch Structure

PART 1

The Bridge

Tie your solution directly to their stated problem. 'Based on what you said about [their problem], here's exactly how we'd fix it.' One sentence. Sets the relevance.

PART 2

The Method (Mechanism)

Explain HOW your system works — not generically, but specifically for their situation. The 3-step framework. The exact tools. The expected timeline.

PART 3

The Proof

1-2 specific case studies of similar businesses you've helped. Real names. Real numbers. Real timeline. NOT generic 'we've helped many clients.'

PART 4

The Outcome

Paint the picture of their world AFTER. 'In 30 days you'll be at [X], by 90 days you'll be at [Y]. Your phone will ring with qualified leads daily. You'll have the bottleneck shifted to delivery, not lead gen.'

PART 5

The Transition

Move directly to pricing. NO PAUSE. 'Want to know what it costs?' or 'Want me to walk you through the investment?' Smooth transition, no awkward silence.

COMPLETE 5-MIN PITCH (ROOFING NICHE)

[BRIDGE]

YOU: So Mike, based on what you've told me — the issue isn't your service or your team. It's that your lead flow is inconsistent because you're relying on referrals. Here's exactly what we'd put in place to fix that.

[METHOD]

YOU: We'd run a paid Facebook ad system specifically targeting homeowners in Houston who are showing buying signals — they've recently moved, they're in storm-damaged zip codes, or they've engaged with home-improvement content. The ads go to a landing page that pre-qualifies them with 5 questions. Anyone who meets your criteria books straight into your calendar.

YOU: We handle the ads, the funnel, the lead capture. Your team handles the appointments. The system is live in 14 days.

[PROOF]

YOU: Last month we had Carlos in Florida go from 8 jobs/month to 27 in his first 30 days with us. James in NY did £45K in his second month after sitting at £8K before. Both running the same system we'd build for you.

[OUTCOME]

YOU: Within the first 30 days, you'd be getting 5-10 qualified appointments per week. Most of those convert to jobs. So you're looking at adding £15-30K/month in revenue from this system — predictably, every month, without depending on referrals.

[TRANSITION]

YOU: Want me to walk you through what the investment looks like?

→ Tying Your Pitch To Their Words

THE 'THEIR WORDS' RULE

Throughout your pitch, USE their exact phrases from discovery. They said 'inconsistent lead flow' — say 'inconsistent lead flow.' They said 'stuck at £18k' — say 'stuck at £18k.' Mirroring their language makes the pitch feel custom-built, not generic.

→ The Method (HOW It Works) — Tactical Guide

This is the meat of your pitch. Most agencies fail here by either (a) being too vague ('we use marketing magic') or (b) too detailed ('we set up 47 GHL workflows...'). The sweet spot:

1. 3 clear steps max. People can't hold more than 3 things in working memory.
2. Concrete deliverables for each step ('We build a landing page,' not 'we optimise your funnel').
3. Their role vs your role clearly defined ('You handle the appointments, we handle the leads').
4. Timeline tied to each step ('Week 1: setup. Week 2: launch. Week 3: optimise.').

→ The Proof — Case Study Selection

RULE 1

Same Niche If Possible

Roofer prospect → roofer case study. Dentist prospect → dentist case study. Niche-specific proof is 10x more powerful than generic proof.

RULE 2

Similar Size

Don't pitch a £18k/mo prospect using your £200k/mo case study. They'll think 'that won't work for me.' Use a similar-size case.

RULE 3

Specific Numbers

'Carlos went from 8 jobs/month to 27 in 30 days.' NOT 'Carlos got a lot more leads.'
Specific numbers = believable.

RULE 4

Address Their Specific Pain

If they said 'I can't find good leads,' pick a case study about lead quality. If they said 'I'm wasting money on ads,' pick a case study about ROAS. Mirror their pain in your proof.

→ The Outcome — Future Pacing

After explaining the method and proof, paint a vivid picture of their future. Use SENSORY language:

FUTURE PACING EXAMPLES

YOU: Within 30 days, you'll wake up to 3-5 new appointments booked overnight — your phone literally pinging with new bookings while you sleep.

YOU: In 60 days, your bottleneck won't be 'where do I find more clients' — it'll be 'I need to hire another crew because we can't keep up.'

YOU: By 90 days you'll have predictable £30K+ months. You'll know on day 1 of the month roughly what you'll close by day 30.

→ Pitch Length Discipline

5 MINUTES MAX

Your pitch should run 5 minutes — not 15. The longer you talk, the more chances they have to find holes. Tight, focused pitches close. Rambling pitches don't.

→ What NOT To Do In Your Pitch

AVOID

- Generic claims ('We're the best')
- Feature dumps (every tool you use)
- Comparisons to competitors
- Industry jargon they don't know
- Long-winded backstory about YOU
- Vague timelines ('quickly')

DO

- Specific outcomes tied to their pain
- 3-step methods (max)
- Position next to alternatives (not vs)
- Their language only
- Brief proof tied to their context
- Concrete timelines (14 days)

→ Handling Mid-Pitch Questions

RULE

Answer Briefly, Return To Flow

If they interrupt with a question, answer it in 30 seconds, then say: 'Good question — let me finish walking you through the rest, then we'll dig into anything else.' Keeps you on track.

→ The Transition To Pricing

After the outcome, immediately bridge to pricing. Don't pause. Don't ask 'any questions?' Don't go silent. Just transition:

- 'Want to know what this looks like investment-wise?'
- 'Cool — let me walk you through the pricing.'
- 'Make sense? Let me show you how we structure the investment.'

The smooth transition signals confidence and prevents the prospect from going into 'objection mode' before they've heard the price.

PITCH PRACTICE

Build YOUR 5-Minute Pitch Today.

Write out your 5-part pitch using the structure. Time yourself reading it. Adjust to 5 minutes. Record yourself. Listen back. Refine. Use this exact pitch on every call until you can deliver it perfectly. Then customise per prospect.

END OF LESSON 07

Pitch = Locked In.

Now the most uncomfortable part of the call for most agency owners — presenting the price.
